Audiobook Highlighting

Authors: Will Rashley, James Pretorius, Kevin Protzman, and Scott Prichard

Problem Statement

People interested in listening to audiobooks want to have a way to highlight the text while listening to it, so they can go back and listen to it again. Our solution would make it easy to find and listen to whatever part of the recording somebody would wish to hear.

Who is experiencing the problem?

People who like to listen to audiobooks and would like to annotate a section of the recording

What is the Problem?

Audiobooks cannot be highlighted intuitively and efficiently.

Where does the problem present itself?

If people want to remember a specific part of the audiobook when listening to it again.

Why does it matter?

Listeners should have an intuitive system to keep track of important sections of an audiobook to revisit later and writers could use a simple way to keep track of references.